

The Rebel Speaks

GOVERNMENT ANTAGONIST AND HUGUENOT

Well, I was writing a new letter, but my "Russian" blue cat ate my work and I had to start all over again. Probably for the best! I was going to express my disappointment with the removal of or Southern heritage. It seems that I am related to Robert E Lee and all of this sudden targeting of my relative through total ignorance is quite upsetting. It's so easy to go after those who are dead and can no longer defend themselves. Do you suppose that I must be a racist because I share the same family as the General?

What about the rest of you... who are your ancestors and has their memory been wiped clean? Gee, I wonder how long it will take the socialists to attack the 5 tribes—after all, you guys owned slaves, remember?

Some of your ancestors fought alongside the General. Remember Stan Waite? Where are your loyalties? The twits have taken a break because of recent hurricanes, but they will be back. Stand your Southern ground! To you twits of

I signed an oath to protect my home state of Virginia against all enemies foreign and domestic. I had to go home when they called for me.

What would you do if home called?

Robert E. Lee was against the secession of the southern states. Lee was against slavery—in fact he never purchased slaves, he inherited them. Also, Lee began freeing his slaves in 1860, before the War of the Secession that he was against. He was the commander of West Point and as a military leader, had been directly involved in the American victory in the Mexican-American War. He was married to a relative of George Washington and his father was a leader in the Revolution. America meant everything to Lee, yet his decision to answer home's call cost him... his home.

Democrap persuasion: Stop kicking over the tombstones of our dead!!

Time for this old Reb to ride. We had a house raising and married off the corporal and had quite a shivaree. Someone said they had come across those tow carpet baggers. Comanche's got 'em. They didn't want them either. He said, he didn't think Comanche's had that many arrows!"

See you on the bridge!

P.S. The little boy-god now known as "Rocket Man" is escalating to dangerous levels and beyond. I am continually reminded of the Cold War and the iron Curtain and watching Russian troops with their rockets, marching through Red Square.

Anyone out there remember that?

The difference is, they hadn't fired missiles over anyone's territory. Personally speaking, I think it's time to build a bomb shelter. Even if you don't think you need one!

Remember the "kiss your arse goodbye" drill in school??

P.S.P.S. Nancy PP and Chuck-You Schumer, what a couple of schmucks! Did you see nancy get run off stage? I'm still laughing! Trump played them like Jimmie Hendrix's guitar
